

Brady Stadnicki, MPP 2015

Prior education: BA, Canadian History, UCalgary

Current role and what a typical work is like: As a Policy Analyst at the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, I build relations with federal government officials and elected representatives to advance the objectives of the Canadian beef cattle industry. I also provide research and coordination for policy development on files related to domestic agriculture regulations, business risk management, animal health and welfare.

How the MPP program has furthered my career: The MPP Program provided me with substantial knowledge about government institutions and the tools to make sound, evidence based policy recommendations. The relationships I developed with faculty, alumni and students at The School of Public Policy has already made a positive impact on my professional career in agriculture.

Advice I would give a new MPP student: Make good use of networking opportunities. The MPP program provides a number of occasions to connect with leaders in the world of public policy who are more than willing to provide guidance. The friendships you develop with classmates and alumni not only benefit you personally but also in your professional career, as you cross paths more often than you think.
