Other Readings:

When you were accepted into the program you were sent a set of notes intended to provide you with some background in basic mathematics. The expectation is that you have reviewed the basic tools of mathematics described in that note. I will expect you to be comfortable with those basic concepts when we begin the course. Extra readings or applications of what we are discussing may be posted on the course web site (described below). You will be notified of these extra readings when they are posted.

Desire2Learn:

Desire2Learn, a web-based course management tool, will be used in this course. Students registered in this course can log in at: <https://d2l.ucalgary.ca/>. Note that D2L features a class email list that will be used. I will use this email list to communicate with you as required. It is your responsibility to ensure that D2L uses the e-mail address of your choice.

Course Outline:

The goal of this course is to provide a foundation of basic economic principles. Other courses in the MPP program will build on this foundation. My assumption is that you have not previously taken a course in economics, or that it has been sometime since you took such a course, or that you feel it would be worthwhile to have a refresher course in basic economics, or, finally, that your first experience with economics was so horrible you would like another shot at it. By the end of our time together you should feel comfortable understanding the terms and tools of analysis used by economists and how these tools and ways of thinking are used to analyze problems in public policy.

Grade Determination and Final Examination Details:

Five (5) Assignments (Pass/Fail)

Due dates: Start of Class the next day.

Each of you will be assigned to a group. Each group will be required to complete and submit solutions to assignments questions. Each day a different member of each group will be assigned the responsibility of putting together the group's solution to the problem and submitting that solution for assessment. These group assignments will be circulated at the end of class each day and will be due the following morning. The grades for the assignments will be either "PASS" or "FAIL". To pass the course, each group must achieve a "PASS" on all five assignments. At the end of our week together, any assignments on which a group earns a grade of "FAIL" will be returned to the group and revised solutions requested until such time that an acceptable solution is submitted.
